

Prakash Advani
Angel Investor

Prakash works with numerous venture funds, angel investors in Singapore and India. He helps startups and early stage companies raise funds. He also runs Mentorprising.com, which offers mentoring to startups in areas of Business strategy, venture capital and marketing.

He is Jury member with NASSCOM for Dewang Mehta IT Awards and mentor/judge with IIT Mumbai's annual business plan content Eureka.

He has helped leading open source companies set-up businesses in Asia Pacific. Prakash currently –heads the Asia Pacific region for Canonical, the company behind Ubuntu Operating System. His responsibilities include Business Development, Marketing and Sales. Prior to this, Prakash helped several new age technology companies set-up businesses in Asia Pacific.

He founded FreeOS.com and co-founder of IndLinux.org. Prakash is a frequent speaker in the area of Cloud and Open Source. His articles have been published in Times of India, Economic Times, Deccan Chronicle and several others.

He attended the Asian International Executive Program at INSEAD, Singapore and did his BA (Economics) from Bombay University.

In his free time, Prakash is pursuing his other interests in improving education, environment sustainability, handwriting analysis, yoga, travel and photography.